ATLAS O Master Line 40' Steel Refrigerator Car A.C.F Demonstrator

American Car and Foundry is one of the oldest and most highly-regarded builders of railroad rolling stock for the United States and the world. They also have been the innovators in designs that became industry standards. As in all industry, improvements are always researched, even for tried and true designs.

In 1939, ACF unveiled a light weight variation of their standard 40' steel refrigerator car. Even though it outwardly appeared identical, the car was a clever combination of welded and riveted construction of low alloy high tensile steel.

The car also featured advancements made in insulation. Every wall void was completely filled to ensure superior cold retention as well as improved car repair. The insulation was applied in panel form and repairs could be rendered without tearing down the superstructure.

The car also featured both water ice and dry ice cooling capabilities which resulted in lower internal temperatures while reducing water ice consumption.

This one-only car featured a unique demonstrator paint scheme that highlighted the company name and logo.
