ATLAS MASTER EXTENDED VISION CABOOSE - TTX 100

~ OFFERED IN HO, N AND O SCALES ~

Most cabooses saw service on the hind end of freight trains up until the late 80s. Their main purpose was to provide shelter for crew members watching the rear of the train and performing switching or backup moves. By the early 1980's most of these cabooses were either relegated to local service or sidelined, for good. A handful of cabooses would continue on in local service, museums, or tourist lines, but there was one unique caboose that stood out from the rest. TTX Caboose 100, which was originally built in 1972 for the Illinois Central, at their Centralia, IL car shop. The IC retrofitted the caboose with equipment to monitor their locomotives, before selling it to the Trailer Train Corporation (TTX) in the late 80s. It now serves as a research and test car for TTX to gather data on new cars at the Transportation Technology Center in Pueblo, Colorado, but also will roam around the country testing new cars in service. The TTX 100 would look right at home bringing up the rear of any intermodel train on your layout.
